

Effectiveness driven by competency, behavior, happiness & culture

Efficiency with a focus on people, outcome/delivery & financials

1.) Foundation for metric & ladder

- Identify for each maturity area elements such as motivators or methods
- These elements build upon each other, ensure that you have the foundation first.
- Select the top 3 elements per box by relevance for the organization in focus

2. Run the assessment

Structured approach

For a repetitive, structured approach create questionnaire with <=2 questions per box.

Expert approach

Get a diverse group of experts to judge in consensus.

Result: agree (+1), neutral (0) or disagree (-1)

3. Calculate maturity level per pillar

Identify the driver per box by summarizing the results. To indicate the impact/weight of actions on higher levels, you might want to use the multiplier.

Result: an indicator reflecting your driver towards the north star, per pillar

4. Actionable solutions

With the guidance you can identify initiatives for the areas of importance. Focus on „launch & learn“ (foundation) first. Move from left to right and then on the top. It might be more practicable to sometimes improve the efficiency before the effectiveness.

Grow individuals to grow the organization

1. The experience journey is linked to the concept of learning experience canvas

2. A basic idea of the concept is to grow the individual competence in a systematic way to grow the overall team

The Experience Journey Map
Flow of the journey

Our map describes 4 major phases within the journey. Each phase levels up the state of mind.

A phase describes the environment

The environment of the team can also be understood as maturity level, it is a constraint for the journey and influence the strategy to move forward.

Focus on the outcome of learning

In the design of the experience journey the focus on the desired outcome is crucial. Use tools such as empathy maps or the map of inner state.

Starting from the current state it is essential to design the future state to explain the outcome achieved.

Measure key results not indicators

For your stakeholder and participant communication it will become crucial to create transparency over the achievements and changes.

At this point focus on the objectives and their key results. The result is the deviation of the indicator, not the indicator itself.

The overall growth in the maturity is more important than specific measure of activities. See the maturity map.
